Easy to Become Involved

URMIA is a fantastic organization for someone with direct or tangential responsibility for addressing risk in their college or university. One of the best parts about URMIA is how easy it is to become involved, no matter how little or how much time you might have. When I joined URMIA in 2010, being new to higher education, URMIA welcomed me with open arms and put me to work! I've greatly valued the relationships and professional development experience URMIA has allowed me to build in just a few short years.

A review of continuing education options for higher education risk managers and affiliates

At the 2016 URMIA Annual Conference in San Diego, President Kathy Hargis asked the affiliate members in attendance at the All Affiliates meeting to consider other benefits URMIA could offer to add value to our affiliate membership category. One suggestion included offering continuing education credits at our conferences. URMIA's Affiliates Committee has developed a summary of some of the continuing education options for higher education risk management and insurance professionals that we would like to share in this month's Insights for all members.

Save the Date: Risk Management Wednesdays Comes to Your Campus

New in 2017! Risk Management Wednesdays

What is Risk Management Week?

Risk Management Week is scheduled annually to highlight the importance of risk management at institutions of higher education. Everyone is welcome to participate.

Promote Best Practices on Campus

URMIA helps risk managers spread the word about good risk management practices among their colleagues. We provide programming and marketing materials to make it easy for risk managers to host events on their local campuses during (or even after) Risk Management Week.

Reach Colleagues Beyond the Risk Management Department

Risk Management Week features a week-long webinar series, but is also about creating a forum for non-risk managers to learn about the importance of local, state, and federal regulations; common risks on college and university campuses; and what non-risk managers can do to advance effective risk practices on their campuses.

Inquiries Are Readily Answered

My membership with URMIA has allowed me to network with higher education risk managers throughout the country. My inquiries about new – and reoccurring risk issues – are readily answered with how others handle the situation, sample policies and guidance to resources. Just as helpful are the questions posed by other members as they draw my attention to possible exposures that hadn't yet come to my attention. Using the references, confirmations of current practice, and personal experiences of my peers validates my ideas and heightens the probability of acceptance of proposals.

Animals on Campus: What, Where, When and How

Government & Regulatory Affairs Committee member webinar recorded on our you tube channel

Animals are frequently found on campus, but the legal requirements sometime conflict when controlling the risks. A student may require an assistance animal; a campus visitor may rely on a service animal; and faculty may use animals in a variety of academic programs. College administrators often have common questions such as what law applies, where can animals go, when should animals be permitted, and how are the risks managed. Join us as we review the results of our recent URMIA survey, discuss what the law requires, and outline practice strategies to manage the compliance and other risks.

Risk Management Considerations Regarding the Clery Act, Violence Against Women Act (VAWA) and Title IX When Students Study Abroad¹

January 2016

STATUTE/REGULATION SOURCE
The Clery Act, as amended by the Violence Against Women Act, 20 USC 1092(f); 34 CFR 668.46. Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972, 20 USC 1681.

BRIEF DESCRIPTION
The Clery Act, as amended by the Violence Against Women Act, and Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 place requirements on colleges and universities to report certain crimes occurring in certain overseas locations and also to take action in response to reports of certain crimes and unequal treatment on the basis of sex. The laws do not have uniform rules and must be carefully read together to understand obligations. While it is important to comply with the laws, it is even more important to develop policies, procedures and training methods to prevent such violations and respond promptly to reported violations. Keeping students safe and successful in study abroad requires us to go beyond the minimum requirements of the law.

POTENTIAL/ACTUAL IMPACT TO HIGHER EDUCATION
The Clery Act and Title IX require colleges to respond to violence, report certain incidents of violence and develop prevention programming.

DISCUSSION
Two federal laws govern college and university reporting of and response to certain crimes and harassment. The Clery Act, as amended by the Violence Against Women Act (VAWA), requires that colleges report certain crimes that occur in certain geographic locations. Title IX requires that colleges appropriately respond to reports of unequal treatment on the basis of sex or gender in a way that tracks such reports and ameliorates the impact of unequal treatment. While the laws overlap in certain circumstances, they should be read and analyzed separately as they have different rules, standards, methods and enforcement entities.

URMIA Opened My Eyes

I can't say enough about how the resources of URMIA have facilitated my success in Higher Education Risk Management. Though when beginning my position at Chapman University, I had over 25 years of experience in the field of insurance and 15 in Risk Management, none of it had been in higher education. While there are many components of a risk management program that are shared across industry, my participation in URMIA opened my eyes to the challenges unique to the field of Higher Education risk management. The collegial and sharing nature of this community is unique and provides an invaluable resource. The people and what they share, the conferences, and the URMIA web network are invaluable aids to success. Eventually, I decided it was time to give back, first serving on the Communications Committee, then co-chairing that Committee, and now serving on the URMIA Board.-
